

what remained with him was a strong sense that he wanted to do the work anyway.. even if the people he spoke to felt nothing for him, he still wanted something from them.

Helping people should be nothing special, like eating, he thought—just something that he did in the course of his life.