

Helping people should be nothing special, like eating, he thought—just something that he did in the course of his life.

He decided that from then on he would not communicate with people until he had met them..It would be difficult for many of them—his temple was in a remote place.. But this was the point. If they didn't want his help enough to get to the temple, it was unlikely that he could help them.